Millions of Model T Fords are still in active service

FOR nearly twenty years, the Model T Ford led the motor industry and it still is used by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service today—an indication of their sturdy worth, reliability and economy.

Because of the tremendous investment which people have in these cars and because so many of them will be driven for two, three, and even five more years, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make replacement parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

For the Ford Motor Company has always believed that its full duty consists not only in making a good automobile at a low price, but also in keeping it running efficiently for you as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

No matter where you live, therefore, you can still buy Model T Ford parts with the same assurance as formerly, knowing that they will give you the kind of service you have a right to expect, and at the same time protect the money you have invested in your car.

All Ford replacement parts, as you may know, are made of the same materials and in the same way as those from which your car was originally assembled, and are low in price because of the established Ford policy.

So that you may get the greatest use from your Model T Ford over the longest period of time, we suggest that you take the car to the nearest Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of any replacement parts which may be necessary. You may find that a very small expenditure will maintain the value of your car and will be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional service.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON FOR APRIL 22

JESUS AND THE HOME

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:1-16.

Golden Text—Jesus thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Loves Little Children.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Wants Children to Come to Him.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being a Christian at Home.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Family.

In this scripture we see Christ as a teacher.

1. Concerning Marriage (vv. 1-12). The question concerning divorce, which the Pharisees temptingly put to Christ, brought forth a teaching which exhibits marriage in its true light.

2. Marriage God's primal law (vv. 6-8). The ideal law of life for the subjects of Christ's kingdom is marriage. This is proven by the fundamental fact of sex. "God made them male and female" (v. 9). The union of the male and female natures is physical, mental and spiritual. In marriage the male and female natures are mutually complemented. "They twain shall be one flesh, so that they are no more twain, but one flesh." God's plan is that man should not be without the woman or the woman without the man (1 Cor. 11:13).

3. Marriage has God's sanction (v. 9).

When God created Eve and brought her to Adam He performed the first marriage ceremony and declared that man should leave father and mother and cleave unto his wife. "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

4. Marriage of the divorced forbidden (v. 10-12).

The marriage relation should only be broken by death and sin. In response to the request of the disciples for further information He declared:

(1) "Whoever shall put away his wife and marry another commits adultery against her."

(2) "If a woman shall put away her husband and marry another she commits adultery."

5. Concerning Children (vv. 13-16). The union of the male and female natures, according to God's primal law of marriage, lays the foundation of family life. The normal issue of such a union is children. In connection with the divine law of marriage, it is fitting that Jesus should set forth His estimate of children and show the interest He has in them. Christian men and women will regard children as the property of God and will esteem it a high and holy privilege to train them for Him. Observe:

1. Children brought for the touch of Jesus (v. 13).

It is incumbent upon all parents to seek for their children personal contact with Jesus.

2. The parents rebuked by the disciples for bringing their children (v. 13).

They seemed to think that attention to children was beneath the dignity of Christ.

3. Jesus' reply (vv. 14, 15). He was displeased—really indignant at their words. He is displeased today over those who are hindering their children from coming to Him.

(3) "Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God" (v. 14). The kingdom belongs to the child.

(4) "Whoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall not enter therein" (v. 15). Those who count themselves morally helpless, and cast themselves upon Jesus Christ, the King, really enter the kingdom.

5. Jesus' action (v. 16). He took the children up in His arms, put His hands upon them and blessed them. Christ is the Father of children. Where Christ's spirit rules, childhood is sacred and children have great care.

Preserve Forests

In a recent proclamation, President Coolidge designated the week April 22 to 28 for the eighth annual observance of American Forest Week and urged the people of the United States to join in its observance, to the end, he said, "that energetic forest policies will be adopted in all communities."

"The rehabilitation of our forests demands first of all that the forest fire evil be suppressed," the President declared. "Many of the forest states, with the cooperation of timberland owners have undertaken organized protection against forest fires, and in recent years, under the Clark-McNary law, the Federal government has given its support to the movement. This great cooperative enterprise must be extended and strengthened until every forested county in the United States is safeguarded against forest fires."

"But we are still far from the goal of complete protection. Every year, on the average, 80,000 acres of our woodlands are steadily undermining their vitality. For this bad situation, the blame falls equally on us all. Public agencies rarely provide adequate protection against fire, the timberland owner is too often indifferent to his property, the average citizen is too often careless with his fire in the woods. We must all gain such respect for the forest that its destruction through indifference or carelessness shall be unthinkable."

In the observance of American Forest Week this year, patriotic citizens in all parts of Virginia are taking an active part. Milton E. Marcuse, president of the Bedford Pulp and Paper Co., Richmond, has been appointed State Chairman to direct and coordinate the many activities planned for the week. In order to bring about more widespread and intensive observance of the week's activities, Mr. Marcuse has appointed local chairmen in practically all the counties in the State. Notice of the week has also been sent to the various Chambers of Commerce, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and other business men's clubs in Virginia.

Mr. Marcuse stated that "although the subject of forestry covers a wide field and the development of Virginia's forest resources presents many problems, the principal ideas which will be emphasized during the week April 22 to 28 are the protection of the forests of the State from fire, and the need of sound timber management to restore and maintain in productive conditions the vast areas of cut-over, burned-over and idle land which at present contributes but little to the wealth of Virginia. The forest problem touches practically all citizens, each of whom can contribute to conservation and forest development by care with fire when he frequents the woods as well as by lending intelligent understanding support to the furtherance of better forestry conditions locally."

CIGAR-SHOP INDIAN MOURNS ITS MAKER

Famous Wood Carver Dies in Canada.

Toronto, Ont.—There died a few days ago in St. Anne de Beaupre, Quebec, at the age of eighty-six, Louis Jobin, the originator of the cigar-shop Indian.

Louis Jobin's family name does not rest exclusively on his bizarre production. He was described as the greatest wood carver in the world. He carved wood for seventy years, though of late his sight had failed and he had laid away the chisel.

The present generation knew him only as the religious wood carver of the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. The pilgrims who left their crutches to walk in their stead little Jobin statues. His work has gone all over the world, but the world is unaware of him. He never signed his statues. You cannot go into a church in rural Quebec or motor through its roads, that are one unending village, without seeing a Jobin. He made warlike shrines and Calvaries as well as statues for churches. His subjects were Christ and Mary and the Holy Babe, the innumerable saints of the calendar, and his chisel and mallet made many an apostle. Indeed, with his long white patriarchal beard, he himself did not look unlike an apostle or an early Christian father.

He did not forget his patron saint, St. Ann. "Our Lady of the Miracles," a more than life-sized statue of her in the garden of the basilica of the Canadian Lourdes and a statue of the same saint in his hand in gratitude.

There is a notable Jobin figure in the study hall of the College of St. Anne de Beaupre and the figure of General Wolfe in a niche of the Canadian Pacific railway office in Quebec is also from his chisel. But for the most part his work would be empty. The original statue was taken by the officers of a British ship, but Quebec, which is determined to honor Wolfe as well as Montcalm, had John replace it.

The Toronto Art gallery has one of his angels and it does not need to hang in the sculpture gallery but in the masterpiece of Chinese art. But for the most part his work would be empty. The original statue was taken by the officers of a British ship, but Quebec, which is determined to honor Wolfe as well as Montcalm, had John replace it.

John was a humble artist, who never talked of art for art's sake, but whatever his hand found to do. What was in demand sixty and seventy years ago was furnished for him.

Canada was a center of the wooden shipbuilding industry. So the young John, although he went for a brief period to New York, found more ample scope for his talents at home.

Learned Art Young.

He has given this account of his early life: "I was born at Pointe aux Trembles and when I was very young my father sent me to my uncle, who was a wood carver, to learn the trade. We did a big business in ships' figure-heads. There were many ships and they all wanted ornaments on the prow and sternboard on the stern. I made dolphins and screws and knots. The sign outside my shop is a Neptune, which was ordered but not taken."

"Forty years I carved for ships," he went on. "Then the steamers came in and iron had no use for wood. I had long carved Indians. I also carved the figure of a notary for a notary's door in Montreal. But for years I have done mostly angels and apostles and saints."

John's art will not altogether die with him. He leaves behind him a nephew, Edward Marcotte, trained in his craft, and St. Anne, though the great master of wood carving is no more, will not be deprived of sacred iconography.

"I have been a nurse for several years and have often seen it used with patients who were run-down and weak. Often I have told them to take it, and the very next day they had been helped after taking it. After taking it, I improved so much that I have taken it since whenever I needed a tonic."

Ask Ban on German Doctors Be Lifted

Berlin.—An urgent plea for raising the embargo placed by the German government on the admission of German doctors to former German colonies—now mandated territories—is made by the German Colonial Society and allied bodies. They have sent a joint petition to the federal government requesting it to call the attention of the League of Nations to the fact, which is said to be admitted by the mandatory powers themselves, that malaria, sleeping sickness, yellow fever, tuberculosis and other diseases are on the increase in these territories and that the supply of doctors to cope with them is notoriously inadequate.

Recent German medical discoveries to combat sleeping sickness, dysentery and malaria, have placed Germans in the front rank of tropical disease fighters and therefore should be made available for reasons of humanity to thousands of sufferers in the mandated territories, the petition declares.
